Editorial Schedule 2022

Communicate your news, reach new customers and raise your company profile through targeted print and digital exposure.

The Stone Specialist magazine, StoneSpecialist.com and the fortnightly Stone Bulletin are your dedicated business to business platforms that ensure total industry coverage.

Take a look at what will be featured over the course of 2022.

January/February

Stone Digital – Shaping a Sustainable Future

This is a preview of what's coming up in the exciting new high-level online event for the stone industry, taking place on 22-23 February. It is organised jointly by the Natural Stone Show (which has been moved to 2023) and Stone Federation Great Britain.

Chemical Consumables

Adhesives, stain removers, colour enhancers, slip resistance reducers, graffiti removal & protection, sealers... a look at the latest developments for stone companies from the scientists.

March/April

Underfloor heating & heat pumps

The thermal mass of stone makes it the ideal surface to cover underfloor heating and, these days, behind wall heating. As heat pumps increasingly replace gas boilers on the way to 'Net Zero' in 2050, inefficient radiators are out and a new era of truly radiant heat begins.

Machine Tooling

A look at the latest developments in diamond tooling and the tool measuring systems that have so improved the productivity of workcentres.

Power & Hand Tools

Even in the age of CNCs and robots, many companies are proud to continue to offer hand finishing as a touch of perfection. We take a look at the tools being used.

Stone Digital Review

A review of the discussions in the new Stone Digital event and its exploration of what the 'new normal' looks like in the stone industry.

May/June

Training

Opportunities for learning the skills needed to work in the stone industry today, including a review of the first year's experience of stone's Trailblazer apprenticeships.

Materials Handling Equipment

The latest devices to avoid all those crush injuries, cuts, bruises, muscle strains and stiff joints that plague an industry dealing with heavy, awkward materials. And without them it is amazing how many companies discover productivity improves.

Stone in the Landscape

Stone is a natural complement to planting for landscapers. Like the flora, it belongs in the landscape, whether it is as a show garden at Chelsea Flower Show, a domestic patio, or urban renewal. This is a celebration of naturally low carbon, so appropriate natural stone in the landscape.

July/August

Engineered Stone & Stone Wholesalers

Quartz, porcelain, sintered stone, granite, marble, quartzite, sandstone, limestone... it's amazing how the product range of those selling to the stone processing and fabricating sector has expanded this century. And it's not over yet.

Water & Dust Management

Many of the products used in the stone industry contain high levels of crystalline silica, which is bad for your health. And processing stone uses a lot of water. Both detract from stone's message of being good for the environment, so they need managing.

Memorials (NAMM Tradex)

As the National Association of Memorial Masons (NAMM) returns to Warwickshire Exhibition Centre for its Tradex exhibition in its new autumn slot, Natural Stone Specialist takes a look at the memorial masonry sector.

September/October

Annual Machinery Review

With the Marmo+Mac exhibition in Verona, Italy, likely to attract more international buyers in 2022 as the impact of the Covid pandemic diminishes, we talk to the major suppliers of stone machinery in the UK about the latest launches and the market for machines in the UK and Ireland.

Stone in Housing

Shortages of bricks and cement and price rises of just about everything following Brexit and the Covid pandemic have not been altogether bad news for the stone producers of the UK and Ireland as, in Britain, the government still aims to see 300,000 built in a year.... any year.

Stone in the Built Heritage

Stone conservation, restoration and renovation certainly play a major role in ensuring the rich built heritage of the UK continues to attract a wide and international audience, as well as preserving the hand skills of the stonemason. We take a look at the sector.

Please note: While it is our intention to adhere to the above programme of features in Natural Stone Specialist, if circumstances dictate, the programme might change without notice.

November/December

Natural Stone Awards

The stone industry and its customers intend to gather again at a top-notch venue in London for a this highlight of the stone industry calendar that recognises and rewards the finest work that the stone industry and its clients have produced in new build and conservation, interiors and landscaping in the past three years.

Stone cleaning

A look at projects that have been cleaned using superheated water, abrasives, nebulous sprays, lasers and other specialist cleaning systems and the systems themselves.

First Look at the Natural Stone Show / Hard Surfaces 18-20 April 2023

In this issue of the magazine we will take a first look at what there is to look forward to as the Natural Stone Show and Hard Surfaces return to ExCeL London after the Covid hiatus. Following the extended break there will be plenty of new ideas for business development from the international line-up of exhibitors.

The NSS Calendar for 2023

With the December issue of Natural Stone Specialist comes a desk calendar to keep you on schedule throughout 2023.

Plus projects covering the main sectors of the stone industry: new build; heritage; hard landscaping; interiors; ecclesiastical; memorial. And, of course, news and comment from the stone industry in the UK and Ireland.
